NUBIA FILMWORKS SIGNS NOTED ACTRESSES TO "A Rose By Any Other Name" Feature Film Project

Washington, D.C./New York - The producers of Nubia Filmwork's new feature film project "A Rose By any Other Name" have recently signed two noted actresses to play leading and supportive roles in their up-coming film.

Meagan Good, who made her motion picture debut in the acclaimed "Eve's Bayou", and appeared on the second "Cosby Show" series has agreed to play the leading role of "Jamyla", which means "beautiful" in Arabic.

Additionally, veteran actress and living legend Ruby Dee has agreed to star in the project in the role of "Big Ma", the neighborhood matriarch.

"These two wonderfully talented women have made a tremendous commitment to our project and are perfect for the roles as I envisioned them", commented writer/director and Nubia Filmworks partner, Shuaib Mitchell-Kedar. "One of the most difficult parts of pre-production is getting actors interested in your project and committed to working to make the story a visual reality. We will never forget the initial support we are receiving from these young ladies. End the end, we will remember the folks who were there with us in the beginning."

"The project is gaining legs and we are ready to run to the finish line," commented Producer and partner Fred Brown, Jr. "What's most exciting about this is that after several years of working on getting the script in the right hands, we have these ladies ready to go because they love the story and can see the vision. Meagan and Ruby Dee are perfect for their roles and are helping to put Nubia Filmworks on the map as we continue to negotiate with potential production/distribution partners. "

"A Rose" has been described as an "urban high-school love story where boy from the hood meets girl from the burbs," similar to a contemporary "Romeo & Juliet". Nubia Filmworks producers are anticipating other actor "sign-ons" as they continue to package the project and navigate a production deal.
